3. (currently amended) A soft tissue anchor ~~according to claim 1 for attaching soft tissue to a bone, the soft tissue anchor comprising:~~ an elongated shaft having an axis, a proximal end, and a distal end; a bone engaging means affixed to the shaft for securing the distal end of the shaft in the bone; and a transverse head engageable with the soft tissue to be attached to the bone, the transverse head extending in a first direction to a first point situated a first predetermined distance outwardly from the axis and extending in a second direction, generally opposed to the first direction, to a second point situated a second predetermined distance outwardly from the axis, the second predetermined distance being less than the first predetermined distance, the transverse head having a width equal to or greater than that of the proximal end of the shaft and the transverse head having a transverse bottom surface adjacent the shaft, a first projection extending a third predetermined distance distally from the first point, a second projection extending a fourth predetermined distance distally from the second point wherein the transverse head further comprises a circular member having a centerline offset a predetermined distance laterally from the axis of the shaft, the circular member including a first flattened rim adjacent the second point.

4. (original) A soft tissue anchor according to claim 3 further comprising a pair of diametrically opposed flattened rim portions orthogonally situated relative to the first flattened rim.
